MAPPING CONCEPTS

THE CONCEPT OF SCALE

Choosing a map means choosing a scale.

Each scale has its corresponding use and purpose.

- When travelling by car, the 1:1 000 000 national map, or 1:250 000 regional map and the 1:100 000 map are the most suitable, since they provide a good overview of the route to be taken.

Regional map
1 cm = 2.5 km

- When travelling by bicycle, a map at 1:100 000 is ideal because it provides information about both major and secondary roads, as well as tourist information.

TOP 100 maps
1 cm = 1 km

- When exploring a region on foot, a scale of 1:25 000 is essential to ensure that you have all the information you need to hike safely (contour lines, buildings, footpaths and tracks, vegetation, refuges, etc.).

TOP 25 map
1 cm = 250 m

CONTOUR LINES

Reading and understanding the relief on maps.

A contour is an imaginary line that links all the points located at the same height above sea-level.

- On IGN maps, relief is represented by orange contour lines.

The closer together they are, the steeper the gradient.

The further apart they are, the gentler the gradient.

- Height above sea-level is generally shown on the thicker, so-called master contour lines.

- Contour lines are separated by a difference in height that we call "equidistance".

Contour lines appear in TOP 25, TOP 25R, Série Bleue and TOP 100 maps.
